

Charlie Kahsen bio

Charlie Kahsen grew up on a dairy farm in Wisconsin, where he went to college, graduating in 1965 with majors in math and economics. Upon graduation, he moved to Boston, went to law school, and passed the bar.

Charlie spent his entire career in the insurance business. He worked for Wausau Insurance Company in various claims positions, ending as its New England manager for liability and property claims. In 1979, Charlie moved to Walnut Creek and commended to work for Dinner Levison, an old line San Francisco insurance broker. After that, he organized and managed several insurance related consulting businesses. He became the US Practice Leader of a claims management consulting group within the firm of Marsh & McLennan and retired from the company in 2005 with the title of managing director. He has continued to consult for Marsh & McLennan on a part time basis.

Charlie lives in Walnut Creek with his wife Muriel, to whom he has been married for 42 years. They have two children and four grandchildren, all of whom live locally. Charlie enjoys bowling, cribbage, vegetable gardening, and travel.
