

Pierre Mebane was born in Bridgeport, Connecticut, and moved to New Jersey when he was in high school.

Pierre graduated from Monmouth College in Long Branch, New Jersey and then became an officer in the New Jersey Army National Guard. At the same time, he began a lifetime career with Xerox Corporation. He began as a sales representative and worked in northern New Jersey for five years and then moved to Virginia to do sales training for Xerox. After three years in Virginia, he accepted a sales manager position in San Francisco. He spent 21 years working for Xerox in San Francisco, holding various positions in sales management, finance, and contract management. He retired in 2008 but returned to Xerox for two separate tours as a consultant.

Pierre and his wife, Carole, live in Walnut Creek near Boundary Oaks. They have two adult children who live in southern California. Their daughter is a UCLA Bruin and their son is a USC Trojan.

Pierre enjoys skiing, tennis, and bike riding and he is ready to take up golf.