

Pat Meehan bio

Pat Meehan is an avid golfer but thinks that his scores need improvement. He also spends part of his time as an arbitrator and mediator and volunteers with the Family Violence Law Center in Oakland, assisting battered women in obtaining restraining orders.

Pat graduated from the University of San Francisco with a philosophy degree and later returned and obtained both a law degree and a master of science degree in environmental management.

Pat began his legal career at Wells Fargo and was also a litigator with a San Francisco law firm. He then moved on to Clorox, where he spent 24 years in its legal services department at the Oakland headquarters and as a director of environment and safety at the company's Pleasanton Technical Center.

Pat married his wife, Liz, in 1975. They have three adult children and two grandsons, both born in 2011.